Alba (Scotland): Past and present

State of Gàidhlig in 1891:

A substantial part of the resident population still spoke Gàidhlig in the district. All speakers were effectively bilingual. The age profile, however, was already heavily biased towards older generations. In the age group of 65+ the language was spoken by almost 80 % of all residents. Nonetheless Gàidhlig was still spoken by the majority within households headed by a Gàidhlig speaker. Strongest Gàidhlig community was the village of Meaghrath (Reay) with 46.2 % speakers of the traditional language. On the other hand no-one in the fishing village of Freasgail (Fresgoe) nearby was returned as speaking Gàidhlig.

Area description:

The district investigated lies in the north-western corner of the county of Gallaibh (Caithness) a few miles east of the county boundary with Cataibh (Sutherland). Main economic activities were concerned with fisheries and agriculture. Whereas the village of Meaghrath (Reay) itself acted as the natural centre of the surrounding farm land Freasgail (Fresgoe) was mainly occupied by fishermen and their families.

Background of Gàidhlig (Scottish Gaelic) Local Profiles:

The 1891 census was the first such enumeration exercise with an unequivocal language question. After more than 100 years the original census forms are publicly available for detailed analysis. During research concerned with the “Gàidhlig (Scottish Gaelic) Local Studies” a vast number of such local statistics have been gathered about the Gàidhlig speaking population of Scotland in that year. As many of these results could not be included in the reports these concise fact-sheets are a welcome way to publish some of the “local gems”. ## Place of birth and Gàidhlig speaking:

The language was evidently a traditional means of communication and not only “imported” by incomers. More than a third of locally born people was Gàidhlig speaking. People born in other parts of the Gaidhealtachd of course were predominantly Gàidhlig-speaking.

Notes:

<sup>1</sup> Born either in Reay or in the adjacent parishes of Thurso and Halkirk (both Caithness) or Farr (Sutherland).

<sup>2</sup> Born in other parishes of Scotland with more than 50 % Gàidhlig speakers in the 1891 census.

Speakers according to place of birth (1) nearby<sup>1</sup> (2) in remaining Gaidhealtachd <sup>2</sup>, or (3) elsewhere

Remarks:

1. Most of the elderly residents were Gàidhlig-speaking. In addition the share of Gàidhlig speakers of the locally born population was still substantial. Therefore this part of Gallaibh (Caithness) can be classified as part of the Gaidhealtachd where the language had been traditionally spoken.
2. According to the age distribution of the Gàidhlig community language transmission seems to have seized effectively in the 1860s.
3. In original census report terms the district had a population of 237 persons of all ages. 76 enumerated inhabitants spoke “Gaelic and English” leading to an “official” share of Gàidhlig speakers of 32.1 %. This was just an under-estimation by 0.3 % compared with the more precise definition based on the usually resident population.
